

Parents

September 2007

TV Guide: sneak Peek At The Fall Line-Up

Don't you just love autumn? The air gets crisper, the leaves change color, and—oh yeah!—no more reruns! Check out some of the new kids' shows premiering this season.

PBS Kids

Super Why! Preschoolers can follow the animated fairy-tale superheroes as they jump into books to find the answers to everyday problems using their reading superpowers.

Mama Mirabelle's Home Movies. This National Geographic gem combines animation with live-action animal footage to teach your kids life lessons.

Word World. The title pretty much says it all: The animated characters are made out of—you guessed it—words. Fun, morphing, lively, dancing words!

Disney Channel

Wizards of Waverly Place. This live-action series about a magical family will leave your kids asking, "Harry Potter who?" Okay, maybe that's a stretch. But it's sure to be Disney's next big hit.

Nick Jr.

Ni Hao, Kai-lan. Spanish was so last season. This year's "It" language is Mandarin, and Kai-lan, a Chinese-American 5-year-old, is just the girl to introduce your preschooler to basic words, phrases, and Chinese culture.

iCarly. Hands down the most innovative new show of the year, this Nick series is for kids—and by kids. It incorporates what real-life children write on the network's Website into the show's scripts.

The Discovery Channel

The Future is Wild. Ever wonder what the earth will look like in a few million years? Three kids and their time-traveling friend are about to find out.

